Statement by Supervisor on Candidacy of
[REDACTED] for Congressional Fellowship

25X1A

[REDACTED] has an established reputation as one of our most competent intelligence officers, with a high potential for growth and further advancement. Her work as an analyst is distinguished by its insight and sound judgment; its sensitivity to the social and economic considerations that may be as relevant as the political; its perception of the US interests that may be involved. She is a quick and easy writer, especially adept at highlighting what is important in a readily accessible way. She is also a skilled participant in discussion groups.

A strong and confident personality, Mrs. [REDACTED] approaches her job--both substantively and organizationally--as a part of a larger undertaking. She views her particular product as a contribution to the essential intelligence input to the making and conduct of US foreign policy. She has shown a consistent and intelligent interest in the problems encountered in producing and improving that input--at the division, office, and Agency level. I am confident that in due course Mrs. [REDACTED] will be ready to assume larger responsibilities--substantive, review, staff, or supervisory. A Congressional Fellowship would, I believe, significantly contribute to that end.

Statement of Interest in a Fellowship in Congressional Relations

Participation in the Congressional Fellowship Program would allow me to observe and to share in the daily activities of Congress, which would be particularly valuable in these days of increasing congressional interest in foreign and economic policy. Moreover, as a member of the executive branch I would have a chance to see first-hand how another part of the government functions.

After nearly ten years as an intelligence analyst, an opportunity to look at a different set of problems and to take on new responsibilities would be challenging. The program would allow me to develop the flexibility needed for career development.

My background in both political and economic analysis hopefully would be of value to either a congressional committee or a member of Congress. Moreover, in the past few years I have had assignments that have required me to write concisely and quickly under pressure on a wide variety of subjects. I would hope that these skills would be useful in any staff assignment.

At a time when the relations between the Agency and Congress are in a state of flux and there is increasing congressional interest in intelligence production, I would hope that my participation in congressional staff activities would help to foster better understanding between the Agency and Congress. Some insight into the needs and concerns of the members of Congress would help the Agency to meet future congressional requirements for its intelligence product.

In the future, I would expect to have increased responsibilities encompassing analysis of domestic and foreign policy problems facing the various countries in Europe. Many of these--inflation, energy, and relations with the Middle East--are much the same as those confronting the US. The program would give me an opportunity to gain a broader understanding and perspective of these problems as well as many others and to see how the US legislature deals with them. The program also would demand performance of a wide variety of tasks that would help me to develop further my ability to cope with several problems simultaneously--a skill that is becoming increasingly needed in current intelligence work, particularly on the supervisory level.
